Who is who in the French lingerie market? 2020 edition

Key access to the French Market

400 pages on precious information on the Lingerie and Swimwear market in France.

The lingerie market in France* is valued at 2.4 billion euros in 2019 (-1.7% compared to 2018). Although historically dominated by French brands, a growing number of international brands are getting establishing there, which illustrates the attractiveness and dynamism of this market, which still offers a great growth potential for the brands. Despite its high-end positioning, its consolidation and the strong competitiveness that reigns there, new brands are succeeding in getting established, in particular because the French consume more lingerie than their European neighbors: French women spend around 18% of their budget on clothing to lingerie. But which strategy to adopt in order to integrate and persist in the lingerie market in France?

The Retail Structure for intimate apparel is split between hypermarkets for mass consumption merchandise, domestic and international mono-brand chains offering "affordable" lingerie, a few, but important, department stores & multibrand chains selling "better-to-premium" intimate apparel and privately owned multi-brand shops and boutiques operating in the medium- to upper-medium price segments. Online & catalogue sales continue to boom with 20% of market share and nowadays is becoming one of the key platforms for lingerie shopping.
